Objectives of the Program	At the completion of his/her Endocrine Surgery Fellowship training, the fellow should be able to apply an integrated multidisciplinary approach, including surgical expertise, to patients with common and complicated endocrine surgical problems. To take advantage of the multidisciplinary expertise often required in the overall management of endocrine surgical patients, we have established clinical rotations in radiology for ultrasonography and computed tomography, nuclear medicine to encompass parathyroid and thyroid imaging and therapeutic 131I administration, pathology and cytology, and the various subspecialties of medical endocrinology. The endocrine fellow would participate and be responsible for educational conferences and intraoperative teaching, as well as stimulate opportunities for clinical and collaborative translational research.
Highlights of the Fellowship (including number of cases and a brief description of the overall program)	The endocrine surgical fellowship is be a comprehensive and integrated program with 6-8 weeks working directly with clinical endocrinologists, 1 week with endocrine pathologists, 1 week with radiologists, 1 week in nuclear medicine, 1 week in medical oncology, and 1 week at the annual Endocrine University in Rochester. The remaining 9 months would be devoted to operative management. The Mayo Clinic caseload is very active as indicated by about 270 parathyroid, 35 laparoscopic adrenal, 130 papillary thyroid cancer, and 20 insulinoma cases per year.
